Introduction and instructions for application to become a CERTIFIED EDUCATIONAL PLANNER

Introduction

The field of educational planning is an exciting and enriching one. Thousands of parents and students rely on consultants and counselors as they are making educational decisions. As such, the future of the profession that provides educational help to families depends on the ability, experience, honor and character of its practitioners. It is with these thoughts that the certification process was born.

In 1994, a group of professionals set in motion a process that led to a new designation for those engaged in helping students connect with appropriate educational institutions. Originally established by the Independent Educational Consultants Association, AICEP is now an independent entity with a commission made up of persons representing such professions as college admissions, high school college counseling, and educational consulting. It was in the spirit of enhancing professional development, providing appropriate recognition for, and raising public awareness of the expertise of educational consultants and college counselors that the Certified Educational Planner (CEP) designation was born.

The CEP credential is a mark of distinction demonstrating extensive knowledge and commitment to the fields of college advising and educational consulting.

There are several pages to this application. This is because there are many ways to demonstrate the necessary excellence and professional commitment. Few candidates will use all the categories.

Applicants for certification must:

- 1) possess a master's degree or higher from a regionally-accredited college or university, or comparable professional experience;
- 2) demonstrate acceptable character, ability and reputation;
- 3) be employed full- or part-time as an educational option provider (i.e., those working directly with students and families to provide choices of colleges, schools, and other growth/education-oriented alternatives);
- 4) pledge in writing to adhere to the Principles of Good Practice as presented in these materials.

This is not an entry-level credential. Successful candidates typically have visited numerous campuses and have a minimum of 3-5 years of full-time experience in providing students with guidance about their educational options.

The credentialing assessment process has two parts – this application and an examination.

In this application you will provide the Commission with an overview of your educational background and your record of professional engagement. You will also present a case study from your professional experience that will offer some insight into your process and strategies for working with an individual student.

Candidates whose application receives a favorable review will be invited to sit for the examination. We strive to be fully transparent with this process, so you will not encounter any surprises or “trick” questions on the exam.

The exam includes:

- Two hypothetical case studies of students for whom you will prepare and support a list of 3-5 recommended colleges, programs or schools.
- A list of four institutions or programs selected by the Commission from the list of site visits you submit with your application. You will choose two of those about which to prepare a profile of the institution or program and the types of students who are best-served there.

The written examination will be offered at various sites across the United States and at many national conferences (e.g., IECA, HECA, NACAC).

Submitting an application is not certification. No use of the CEP designation, in any way, is permissible before official designation is granted by the Commission.

The CEP designation is granted for five years. As a CEP, it will be your responsibility to pursue and record professional development activities that will lead to your recertification. Recertification procedures and requirements will be distributed to you after you receive your designation as a CEP. Site visits and continuing education hours are the basis of recertification.

All information in the application will be kept strictly confidential and exams are read completely anonymously.

Please email our office (info@aicep.org) if you have any questions.

Specific Instructions

1. Read the entire application before beginning to answer any of the questions.
2. Do not duplicate information. If you include information in one place, do not repeat it in another part of the application. (Hence it is important to read the entire application first and plan your responses in advance.)
3. It is not necessary, nor is it expected, that every applicant will find every section of the application germane to her/his experience and background. If a particular section is not pertinent, indicate by printing or typing N/A.
4. If extra space is needed, use additional blank sheets. Identify each sheet in the upper right-hand corner with your name and number of the application item(s) to which the information relates.
5. Be accurate and factual in every reply. Do not skimp on details, but be as concise as possible. Wherever there is a question of accuracy (dates for example) qualify your response with “about” or “approximately,” but use these only when necessary. Use alphabetical abbreviations (e.g., NACAC), only after stating the full name first.
6. The last 10 years of professional and personal activities are considered to be most relevant. However, candidates should use their own discretion as to inclusion or non-inclusion of background information.
7. The Commission reserves the right to request documentation of any item in the application.
8. As possible, attach a copy of your job description for education-related experiences.
9. Submit either a copy of transcript of coursework leading to your highest degree or a copy of the degree itself.
10. Carefully recheck all items on the application before signing the form and mailing it.
11. Be sure to include supporting material that is absolutely pertinent to describing your activities. Do not insert pages in individual plastic covers. Please eliminate unnecessary bulk if mailing your application.
12. Retain a copy of your completed application for your file. Applications may be submitted as email attachments to info@aicep.org or you may send the original of the application with supporting material to:

Please list below any other significant experiences or achievements that you believe are important to the Commission’s assessment of you as a candidate for the credential of Certified Educational Planner. These might include awards or honors you have received, relevant programs or events you have organized, consulting you have done with institutions, relevant courses you have taught or any extenuating circumstances you believe are relevant to appropriate consideration of your application. Please attach additional pages as necessary.

College/School/Program Visits

If you are a college counselor, an independent educational consultant specializing in colleges, or an independent educational consultant specializing in schools, please list 30 colleges or schools you have visited in the last few years and/or colleges or schools you feel comfortable writing about after having a Visit Equivalent (see below).

Visit Equivalents: Face-to-face institutional briefings or update sessions may be used to accumulate Visit Equivalents for those doing college or boarding school advising as long as they are approved by the Commission. These include such things as a college representative updating a regional group of IECs, a high school visit by a college representative, a counselor reception hosted by one or more colleges, a School Connections Workshop. Documentation is required for briefings used to accumulate Visit Equivalents (designate each briefing with an 'E' in your list and provide an explanation of the activity).

Formula: 5 briefings or update sessions = 1 Visit Equivalent (A maximum of 10 Visit Equivalents is allowed. Thus, a minimum of twenty-eight on-site visits are required.)

These briefings/update sessions are added to your total number of institutions for purposes of the Assessment. That is, if you list 5 briefings (instead of one personal visit), the total number of institutions you are listing here increases from 30 to 34. For the Assessment, you are expected to be equally knowledgeable about institutions you have visited as well as those that you list as Visit Equivalents.

Therapeutic consultants: there is no allowance for institutional briefings or update sessions. All of your listed schools/programs are site visits.

During the assessment you will be given the names of four institutions from the list you provide below. You will select two of the four about which to provide responses to a series of prompts. The colleges/schools/special needs facilities you list should be ones about which you will feel comfortable writing as part of your assessment. The prompts are these:

- What type of student might be happy and best served at this college/school/program?
- What are the stand-out features or attributes of this college/school/program?
- Describe the physical plant and the influences of the surrounding communities on the school environment.
- In general, what are the admission criteria? What are the general parameters of students you would refer to this college/school/program?
- Please name one or two examples of similar colleges/universities/schools/programs and describe the reason for the similarities.

List below the name and date of each evaluative site visit (or Visit Equivalents as described above) made to a school, college, and/or program.

Limits of Expertise

Give a couple of examples of potential situations in which you might feel you have reached the limits of your expertise and for which you would seek assistance from (or make a referral to) another professional.

Case Study

Select a student with whom you have worked in the past three years. On a separate page, please outline the student's academic and personal profile, interests, issues, parents' parameters and any other relevant information. Describe your process in working with this student (and family). Please focus on the major elements of the case. You should probably be able to accomplish this in 3-4 paragraphs.

Finally, list the colleges/schools/programs you suggested to the student and explain why you felt they were particularly good matches for the student. (If you care to share outcomes, please feel free to do so.)

REFERENCES

Sometimes during the evaluation process it is helpful for us to speak with professional colleagues of candidates. Please list five such professionals (CEPs, supervisors, independent educational consultants or other professional colleagues) who can comment on your current educational counseling or consulting skills, your character and your ethical standards.

PRINCIPLES OF GOOD PRACTICE

Introduction

These principles are designed to promote and maintain the highest standards of professional service and personal conduct among its practitioners. Attestation to the Principles is required for certification.

The planner's primary obligation is to represent each client accurately based upon a professional evaluation of the circumstances and requirements of the case.

I. Competence

- A. An educational planner strives to be aware of and practice within the boundaries of his/her competence based on relevant education, training and/or experience. Relevant education refers to psychology, educational counseling, child development and other associated courses. Training can include apprenticeship to, mentoring by, and/or supervision by an experienced consultant or counselor. Experience may include admissions, counseling, placement, or administrative positions in schools, colleges, or other educational settings
- B. A planner strives to be aware when a case is partly or entirely outside the scope of his/her knowledge or expertise, and may seek – respectively – to consult with or refer to colleagues possessing specialized knowledge or expertise.
- C. A planner strives continually to update his/her knowledge of educational options across the broad range of schools, colleges, and/or programs pertinent to his/her practice through site visits and other appropriate means of gathering information.
- D. A planner strives to present him/herself as able to deal only with those areas in which he/she has competence.
- E. A planner strives to know and adhere to federal and state laws relevant to educational counseling, consulting, and planning.

II. Multiple relationships with potential conflicts of interest

- A. A planner strives to avoid multiple relationships with his/her client and/or his/her client's family that could reasonably and foreseeably give rise to actual or perceived conflict(s) of interest, interfere with the ability of the counselor or consultant to provide objective services, or embarrass the client or the family.

- B. To avoid potential misunderstandings, a planner who has another role – such as being an owner, part-owner, board member of, employee of, consultant to, or trainer for a college, school, or other program – shall provide to clients a written disclosure describing this additional relationship. The planner should include with this disclosure a consent form for the client and family to sign, indicating that they have been informed of this additional role, have discussed it with the planner, and agree to proceed with the services.
- C. If a planner has provided or plans to provide services to the client and/or the client's family as a member of another licensed profession or professional organization, the counselor or consultant shall follow the principles and practices of that other profession or professional organization, such as those specified by statute, regulation, or the ethical code of that other profession or professional organization – including any limitations on potentially conflicting multiple relationships.

III. Relationship with the student and family

- A. Although the child and his/her own best education and developmental interests are the main focus of our work, the parent(s), stepparent(s), or guardian(s) who may participate in the process in person or by phone, are to be valued as important contributors.
- B. The educational consultant has an obligation to discuss with the parent(s) or guardian(s), as early as feasible, the fees and financial arrangement. The planner may include the child when discussing the nature and scope of these services and the limits of confidentiality. The planner respects the integrity of the consulting relationship.
- C. The primary focus of the consultant or counselor in most instances is to discern and recommend options that will serve the best interests of the child. This most appropriately includes some meeting or communication with one or both parent(s) or guardian(s) to get the views of the child's needs and the resources currently available. Similarly, consultation with selected schools, other planners, and other professionals may be necessary or desirable.
- D. The consultant or counselor must clarify that his/her service does not guarantee that a placement will be made. This preserves the possibility of recommending that the child remain in the same educational situation or participate in an alternate work or study experience as part of an educational plan, at least for the time being.

- E. The planner strives to interact with students in ways that are respectful, recognize their dignity, and show sensitivity to their special strengths, values, and needs.
- F. The planner strives to provide substantially the same information appropriate to each participating parent(s), guardian(s), child, or others involved, such as other professionals.
- G. The planner strives to be aware of cultural, individual, and role differences. Differences may arise from such factors as age, race, gender, language, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, national origin, and socioeconomic status. The planner tries to eliminate the effects on his/her work of biases based on these factors and does not knowingly participate in or condone unfair discriminating practices.

IV. Relationships with schools, colleges, or other programs

- A. The counselor or consultant neither solicits nor accepts compensation from any school, college, institution, or special program for placement of a child. In addition, the planner strives to avoid actions that could give parents, schools, colleges, special programs, colleagues, or other professionals even the appearance of soliciting or accepting such compensation.
- B. The planner strives to understand the philosophies, values, missions, goals, approaches, and methods of schools, colleges, and other institutions and programs from which he/she draws his/her recommended options. In addition, the counselor or consultant strives to avoid actions that could give schools, colleges, institutions, or special programs even the appearance of applying undue influence on their decisions regarding admission or other dealings with his/her students.
- C. The planner does not write for the student any biographical or other essays required in application materials, although the planner may have a coaching role, such as discussing with the student some desirable elements to include or some ways of coping with written or interview questions about past or current learning or other difficulties.
- D. The consultant or counselor strives to maintain awareness of current practices and trends in those types of educational settings pertinent to the services he/she offers.

- E. The counselor or consultant strives to build positive professional relationships with admissions officers and other educators at the schools, colleges, institutions, and special programs pertinent to the services he/she offers.

V. Relationships with other professionals

The planner strives to cooperate in reasonable and appropriate ways with other counselors/consultants and work with them in the enhancement of one another's practices and in the advancement of educational planning. Sharing information has become a tradition of consultants and counselors. Planners do not ask for payment when they serve as resources to each other.

VI. Advertising and other public statements

- A. In advertising and other public statements, the planner strives to avoid making statements that are false, deceptive, misleading, or fraudulent, either through what they state, convey, or suggest, or what they omit about the consultant or counselor's professional practice and activities, or those of individuals or organizations with which he/she is affiliated. The responsibility to strive to be accurate and to avoid false or deceptive statements applies, for example, to the consultant's training, experience and competence; degrees and credentials; association and affiliations; services; and fees. A planner may claim special abilities only if they are demonstrable.
- B. Through paid or unpaid public statements or announcements in meetings, the media, or any other form of advertising, the planner may use the appropriate opportunities to increase public awareness and understanding of the profession of educational planning and his/her own spectrum of expertise and services.
